

WALKER SUCCEEDS WHERE HUTCHISON FAILED

Englewood Golf 'Pro' Defeats Gene Sarazen, 5 and 4, in P. G. A. Tourney at Inwood—Barnes, Hagen and French Other Semi-finalists.

By KERR N. PETRIE.

Three players who were selected for the American professional team abroad survived for the semi-final round of the Professional Golfers' Association championship yesterday at the Inwood links at Far Rockaway, while the fourth place was drawn by one who, while he did not go to St. Andrews, has been climbing to heights of form as high as any in the various tournaments held this year in the East. The name of this latter individual is Cyril Walker, instructor at the Englewood Country Club. With Cyril into the last bracket but one came in the order of the draw Jim Barnes of Polham, the national title holder. Emmet French of Youngstown, captain of the American pro team, and Walter Hagen, former national open champion and present holder of the Western crown.

Considering the calibre of the players who had survived the second round yesterday's golf was productive of margins that were startling in their one-sidedness. Jim Barnes drew his prize in the way of an easy match, and this despite the fact that he was paired with the man who fought it out in the final of the same name in the Western Open. Engineers Country Club two years ago, Freddy McLeod of the Columbia Country Club of Washington. While Barnes was winning the open championship at Columbia this year Fred was tying Hagen for second place, a good few shots behind Long Jim, it is true.

Barnes evidently felt that it was up to him to improve on the Washington record that the one horse showing in the U. S. G. A. open about represented the true run of professional golf these days. In any event Barnes took McLeod into camp by the time the match had reached the turn in the afternoon, the score that went down on the board being the startling one of 11 up and 3 to play. John Golden of Tuxedo, who stalked the U. S. G. A. open about represented the true run of professional golf these days. In any event Barnes took McLeod into camp by the time the match had reached the turn in the afternoon, the score that went down on the board being the startling one of 11 up and 3 to play.

In the other matches French accounted for Gene Sarazen of Grassy Sprain by 5 and 3, while Walker triumphed over Jock Hutchison had failed so dismally, defeating Gene Sarazen of Titusville by 5 up and 4 to play.

Two Matches One Sided. Of these four matches only two showed any semblance of a fight once the half-way mark had been passed. With Barnes and Hagen each 6 up, it was only a question of when the match would finally pick the bones of their victims. French went to luncheon 4 up on McLeod, but George got two of these holes back on the first three of the afternoon and the American team captain had to extend himself in the afternoon to a extent not shown by the margin of 5 and 3. At the twelfth McLeod was still no nearer than French began to stir and then that kind of golf brought the match to a head on the fifteenth green.

Sarazen in his watch with Walker was very different being from the lad who the day before had so easily and decisively overthrown the holder of the P. G. A. and British open championships. He got off to a bad start and all day long was hounded by the cleverly by Walker. At the sixteenth in the morning the pair were on an equality, but the Englewood professional annexed the last two holes in four and carried an advantage of 5 up with him into the second eighteen.

Walker's cool and deliberate methods seemed to worry Sarazen. All the gentlemanly things that he had done in the Pennsylvania State open championship, who took his time about his shots and never hurried once he was in the hole, he could get the best out of the shot. It was very obvious to those who followed the game closely that Sarazen was greatly lacking in this vital matter of a expert approach. Moreover, it was noticeable that while he has thoroughly mastered the art of drive, approach and put, there are things about the game that are a closed book to Gene.

The one thing that struck the gallery most of all was the way Sarazen swung his club. He had a powerful stroke, a style on the ninth green of the afternoon round. Walker in putting rolled his ball past the cup and almost against that of the hole. He was not three inches apart took out a niblick and tried to pitch the stylic. Evidently Sarazen has not yet heard what a player is allowed to lift his opponent's ball when the spheres are not six inches apart.

It may be argued that Walker should have removed his ball, but for the professional golf is something more than a sport. It is a business. And there are more things in this business than mere driving from a tee and approaching and putting for the cup. Perhaps Walker was perfectly justified in reaping the benefit of his rival's ignorance.

Walker Takes Four Straight. Fortunately this little mislay did not affect the result. After a string of five halves at the opening of the second round Walker came with a run and gathered in the sixth, seventh and eighth to stand 6 up. Sarazen's blunder kept him from having the ninth, but the Titusville lad took the tenth when Walker pulled his tee shot into a trap and then drove his recovery clean across the green into the rough.

Sarazen had a grand opportunity at the tenth, but he was playing the game of a defeated man by this time and when Walker pulled his tee shot into the trees and sacrificed a shot getting closer to the hole, Sarazen was out of the green and then took three more to get down. After that Walker had merely to hang on and play for halves until 15 and coming back in 14. For the first eight holes in the afternoon Jim was one under four, so McLeod was given little opportunity to catch up.

Hagen was also going great guns in his match with Hagen. At the first turn he was only 1 up, but by coming home in 34, with a couple of 2s in his last, Walker raised his lead to 6 up. Driving for the fourteenth Golden was only 2 down. Then Hagen sank a twelve foot putt for a 2 and on the last three Golden made Hagen a series of golden presents. For the eleven holes played in the afternoon Hagen was 4 up.

The seeds of derring-do accomplished by French in shipping and putting against in most of McLeod's tribulations was Hagen's in this re-

Single G. Beats Romala for Purse of $5,000

CHERRYVILLE, Ont., Sept. 29.—Single G. champion pacer of the States, owned by William Bartoof of Cambridge, Ind., showed his heels to-day to Canada's fastest pacer, Romala, in two heats of a special harness race for a purse of $5,000.

In the first heat the Canadian entry led until the last fifty yards, when Single G. by a magnificent sprint, dashed under the wire a winner by a length. The time was 2:05. The second heat lacked a thrill, for the American horse led all the way and jogged to the finish in 2:18, after Romala carried the crushing load of 151 pounds in the Queensboro Handicap at two and a half miles, and galloped all the way to win easily by four lengths. J. E. Davidson's Valparaiso, second and J. E. Davidson's Valparaiso, third.

H. W. Maxwell's Decisive, the only other contestant, fell half a mile from home and threw Jockey Cramer over his head. The jockey suffered a fractured leg.

Sweepstake's performance was a sterling one. Max Hirsch had him in tip-top condition and although he was at the short odds of 1 to 2 Mr. Loft, who all his friends to have a wager on him. Mr. Loft, who made a hurried trip to the track to see her pet in action, also was confident of his success and declared there was no chance of beating him.

When the starter's flag fell Sweepstake made a wild dash for the lead, but Jockey Merger took a firm grip on him and held him back. This move allowed Decisive to take command during the first half mile, while Sweepstake, under restraint, raced along in second place. But a half mile was far enough for Sweepstake to remain behind any horse, and when Merger gave him more rein he bounded out from the front in a few jumps. But he was not free to race his best.

Merger still had a tight hold on him and for the next quarter of a mile he and Decisive raced close together. Sweepstake carried Decisive along at such a rapid pace that the Maxwell representative took an obstacle badly and stumbled. But those standing near the track saw that the Maxwell representative took a firm grip on him and Merger took a firm grip on him and Merger's reins and allowed his charge to romp along in front. He was never in danger of defeat and at the end was not taking a long breath.

While the race was in progress Mrs. Loft stood in her box surrounded by a group of friends. She didn't say a word from the beginning to the end of the contest. But those standing near the track saw that the Maxwell representative took a firm grip on him and Merger took a firm grip on him and Merger's reins and allowed his charge to romp along in front. He was never in danger of defeat and at the end was not taking a long breath.

The Cleopatra, the other feature of the programme, went to John Sanford's sturdy filly Chateau Thierry in command style. The event was for mares and fillies at one mile. Five times made up the field. They were Edwina, Elected 2d, Chateau Thierry, Escapade and Good Bye.

Edwina attacked with a barrier flying and quickly opened up a big gap on her field, but before the first furlong had been covered Good Bye reached her throat and the pair stepped along in a terrific race. Five times made up the field. They were Edwina, Elected 2d, Chateau Thierry, Escapade and Good Bye.

The racing on the whole was good, but two horses ran so disgracefully that an official investigation is likely to result. The first of these was Edwina, trained by W. H. Fisher. It is either the worst worst in training or there is
